Northern Ireland host the 7th National Police Memorial Day, 2010

National Police Memorial Day was set up in 2004 by Sergeant Joe Holness to commemorate the memory of colleagues lost in the line of duty. In its seventh year it will be the second visit to Northern Ireland and will take place on Sunday 26th September 2010 at the Waterfront Hall in Belfast at 2pm. Each year the service is held in one of the four countries of the UK. The event is open to everyone to attend. To register your interest please visit www.nationalpolicememorialday.org or phone 07843 293958.

National Police Memorial Day 2009

Last year the sixth National Police Memorial Day service took place at St David's Hall in Cardiff, with the Home Secretary Alan Johnson joining a 1,400 strong congregation. Last year eighteen police officers lost their lives whilst on duty.

In a moving address at the service the Reverend Martin Spain, Moderator of the Free Church Council of Wales and a serving officer with Dyfed Powys Police said that police officers join the service because "they want to make a difference and to help people, to make things better". He emphasised the "need to stand firm and hold on to the values of our fallen colleagues". During the service candles were lit to represent each country in the United Kingdom as a tribute to their fallen officers.

The day has grown to be an important one with HRH Prince of Wales becoming patron in 2006 and attending the service held in Liverpool in 2008.

In 2008 the founder Joe Holness, a Kent officer now transferred to the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA), was deservedly presented with the Queen's Police Medal. Both Joe and his wife Sharon work tirelessly all year round raising money and keeping in touch with the families of fallen officers.
